May Term Adventures
The Uncommon Art of the Common Man

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

How does a small women's college in Staunton, Virginia prepare its students to be members of a global community? The answer is, in more ways than you may think . . .

Fifty-seven Mary Baldwin students visited foreign countries as part of Study Abroad programs during May Term. Travel provides an invaluable opportunity for students to learn firsthand about other cultures. We are proud of our new language and culture department, which was cited for its innovative approach to foreign language study in the August 18, 1995, issue of the Chronicle of Higher Education. The department will emphasize studying language in the context of culture. We are also proud of our faculty who strive to bring an international perspective to their classrooms, people like those featured in this issue of the magazine.

Our international students contribute significantly to appreciation of other cultures on campus. In recent years, we have had students from Argentina, Bulgaria, Columbia, England, Ethiopia, Kenya, India, Italy, Japan, Liberia, Philippines, Sweden, Thailand and Germany. In addition, four different groups of Japanese students come to Mary Baldwin each summer to study English.

Last spring the college's Advisory Board of Visitors chose globalization as the topic for its spring meeting. After two days of presentations by experts in the field and hours of spirited discussion, the board compiled a final report to submit to the college. The report said, "The single most striking conclusion of the board was that MBC is already doing a good job of preparing students to be citizens of the world."

It is gratifying to know that we're on the right track, but we cannot afford to be complacent. With your support, we shall continue looking for new ways to bring the wider world to Mary Baldwin and Mary Baldwin to the wider world.

Sincerely,

Dr. Cynthia H. Tyson

Every new editor comes armed with a vision for his or her publication. Mine is quite simple: that when you come home and discover The Mary Baldwin Magazine amid the piles of bills and junk mail on your hall table, you will pounce on it and thumb through it right there in the hall. That you will not even have taken your coat off before you find an article of irresistible interest, and that it will take the concerted efforts of your spouse and children to drag you away. That later you will think about that article and even page through it again during a quiet midnight hour.

With this in mind, my first efforts are in the direction of content. In this issue you will find more feature articles and fewer departments. Mary Baldwin is an exciting place to be these days. Admissions and SAT scores are up. News organizations from around the country are lining up to cover the opening of the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership. Faculty are busy researching everything from Queen Elizabeth I's royal progresses to bullfighting. Alumnae are taking leadership roles in organizations from the Abbey Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Arts Center in Williamsburg, Virginia, to the Republican National Committee. I want the magazine to reflect the ferment and vigor of the college and its graduates.

My vision is not to have a good magazine; it is to have a great magazine. This is what I will be working toward. We will be soliciting input from various corners of the campus and other corners outside the campus. We are establishing beats in order to cover the news around campus more thoroughly and efficiently. We may start a Letters to the Editor section. Furthermore, do not be surprised if you see some changes in design in the next magazine. Consider your input solicited, also. Have you gotten caught reading in the hall yet? Why not? Let us hear from you.

We asked six of the students to comment on the value of their May Term study abroad experiences.

Scuba-diving in the Great Barrier Reef among beautifully colored fish and coral is one memory that will stay with me for a lifetime. This memory will always be enriched by Dr. Cary's thumbs up underwater "okay" sign and Tara Anderson's constant look of total amazement as we three swam among the reef's treasures. We saw a leopard shark, a white tip reef shark and were able to pet and feed a sea turtle.

My one month abroad opened the world for me. I learned so much about the Maori culture of New Zealand and actually spent an unforgettable night in their village on North Island, New Zealand. I also learned so much about the aborigines' ability to survive in a hostile environment in Australia.

After my brief month abroad, I was not in a real hurry to return to the United States. The cultures of both New Zealand and Australia are more relaxed and not as pressured as the American culture seems to be. Although we were busy every moment of each day, life in New Zealand and Australia truly progresses at a slower pace.

The trip changed my outlook on life and made me realize just how small the world can be. It permitted me to participate in two unique cultures and experience firsthand a world that I had previously only read about. I plan on using what I learned when I become a teacher.

I hope to be able to return to New Zealand and Australia sometime in my future. I hope Mary Baldwin College continues to have the May Term study abroad programs in addition to the other study abroad programs they now offer. Students are able to give back to the college community what they have learned while abroad. Having students and professors going abroad actually enhances and enriches the whole college.

I went on this trip expecting to take a class in sociology, but in fact, I felt after returning as if I had taken a course in political science, history, anthropology, economics, art history, religion and philosophy, among others.

Although I have been overseas previously in high school, I enjoyed this trip more because of the vast difference in traveling with college students. I look at people, traditions, and cultures of the world on an entirely different level after returning to the U.S.

I realized, of course, how fortunate we are in the United States in our plentiful resources, but more importantly, I truly understand that the United States is not the center of the universe. The American way is not necessarily the finest way, and this concept is not fathomable until you hop to another lily pad and out of the home pond. There is a saying, "Life is a book and those who have not traveled have only read the first page."

The program made me realize how much there is in the world that we don't see, and the fact is that we only live once — so to see it all, you must live wisely and make priorities. I was reminded that money and material objects aren't the important things in life; rather, memories, sights, people and laughs are worth more than anything. I remember this and live by it everyday. When I begin to get caught up in American ways, I think of the people I met in Australia and New Zealand who were so much happier than we are but have so much less. These things are learned as your eyes are opened to a new way or style of living. It is so wonderful.

Some great experiences that stick out: in New Zealand — staying with the Maoris, hiking on Unipukapuka (an island in the Bay of Islands), going jet boating and sea-kayaking. In Australia, snorkeling in the Great Barrier Reef was an experience of a lifetime! Also, Sydney Zoo, kangaroos, hiking the Blue Mountains, and were going the next day. It was so exciting and new.

I graduated four days after I returned, and when I came home, I felt sad. I wanted to return to that learning, excitement, beauty, wonderful attitudes, pleasant people and travel. I cannot wait to return to both countries. They are both uniquely wonderful.

paddle boarding at 6:30 a.m.

I learned more in one month than I did in years in a classroom. I was constantly absorbing new things around me, and I wanted to read about where we

"You have to travel with an open mind and turn those little crises into adventures"

While at MBC, I studied in three countries: England, Bulgaria and Japan. Each of these experiences has greatly influenced my decision to become an anthropologist. I cannot even begin to describe how my experiences in these three countries, especially Japan, changed my outlook on America, on foreign policy and government, and showed me the vast differences in cultures throughout the world. For example, I learned so much about Japanese life, values, and politics from living with a host family and working in the Diet. In Bulgaria, the interaction with the students provided valuable insight on life in a struggling Eastern European country.

One experience that sticks in my mind from this trip is the border crossings from Bulgaria and Greece to Turkey. All the checkpoints bordering Turkey were heavily armed, though there is no real threat of invasion from that country. As our van passed through the checkpoint from Turkey into Greece, our vehicle went through a car wash to "wash" the "dirt" and ideas from the van and us as we entered Greece. When we asked people about it later, their reply was that the water washed away any germs and diseases from Turkey. When we told them the car was the only thing that got cleaned, they shrugged their shoulders. Even though this act was benign, it reminded me of the ethnic cleansing that is going on in Bosnia and Croatia. Ethnic distinctions in this area of the world are fervently defended.

Another experience I remember is when an old woman, whom I did not know, came up to me while I was in Sophia and started to talk to me. Though I did not understand much Bulgarian, through her kindness and gentle manner, we were able to have a conversation without much effort. She took my head in her hands and told me I was beautiful. I looked into those old woman's eyes and my perspective on Bulgarians changed forever.

If possible, I will continue traveling throughout the world. And yes, I would recommend the program to anyone interested in traveling who can "rough" it, that is, not expect American standards or American food. After all, you are there to study and live in another country. You have to travel with an open mind and turn those little crises into adventures!

My trip to Asia is a collection of images: the school children's uniforms and yellow hats, the women in kimonos riding the subway, the gas pumps hanging from the ceiling . . . The subtle differences between the places I visited and comparable areas in the United States are what remain especially clear.

My experiences during this trip made me realize the magnitude of America's influence around the world. It also made me more capable of reflecting upon American society and culture.

I now feel that I must put forth a greater effort to learn to speak foreign languages fluently. Everywhere I went people spoke English, but I could not communicate with them in their native language. This experience was very frustrating. I hope eventually to be fluent in French, Spanish and Japanese.

My experiences in all four countries demonstrated the importance of an international approach in any career, particularly environmentalism, which is my interest.

For my senior thesis I chose to do a paper on architecture, specifically Alberti's Sant'Andrea in Mantua. Of course, for this reason Dr. James included Mantua in the May Term trip. I had to see the building I had spent an entire semester researching and writing about. The day we went to Mantua I was excited, to say the least. I couldn't wait to see "my church." Well, when we finally arrived at Sant'Andrea, I couldn't believe my eyes! I could have stayed there all day. I just wandered through the interior soaking it all up. I was such a great experience to see so much hard work on a thesis come together. It was the icing on the cake!

I felt I came back from Italy with a wealth of knowledge and some of the greatest experiences of my life. I was well prepared educationally for the trip through my courses at Mary Baldwin, but by being in the country, it was like my eyes were reopened. I guess you could say I have a new, even a stronger appreciation for Italian Renaissance art. A good way to say it — a passion for art!

The greatest thing about the group that went to Italy is that none of us were close friends before the trip. We knew each other as acquaintances and that's about all. By the end of the trip, we had all become close. Study abroad gives a person the chance to have a great learning experience and to make friends.

STRESSES CULTURAL SENSITIVITY

BY MICHELLE HITE MARTIN

"If you ask many Americans to draw a loaf of bread, they will probably draw a Wonderbread-looking loaf with a plastic baggie and twist tie," says Dr. Anne McGovern, head of MBC's new Foreign Languages, Literatures & Cultures Department. She adds, "Now, if you ask any French person to draw a loaf of bread, they're going to draw a long, flatter, tube-shaped baguette. The same word — bread — conjures up a totally different image for a French person than it does for an American. To understand this difference, and not to judge it, is an attempt at cultural sensitivity and understanding."

In developing the new department combining languages and anthropology, the major goal was to help students develop cultural proficiency. This consolidation of programs was featured in the education section of the Chronicle of Higher Education in August.

"There are knowledge and skills that make you culturally proficient," says Dr. McGovern. "There are behaviors that are acceptable in certain situations in one culture, but not in another. If our students have the knowledge that different is OK, then they become more culturally proficient . . . When our students learn the skills to discern what is appropriate and how to react, then they become even more culturally proficient. Our main goal is for students to reach that level of sensitivity, understanding, knowledge and language skills."

The idea for the department began with a discussion Dean of the College Dr. James Lott had with several MBC language professors. Following that lead, Dean Lott approached MBC's Assistant Professor of Anthropology and Spanish Dr. Carrie Douglass about combining the language and anthropology disciplines. Four majors are offered in the new Foreign Languages, Literatures & Cultures Department: Asian Studies, French, German and Spanish. Students may also take courses in Japanese and Russian. Courses in anthropology will be required for majors.

"The merging of anthropology and languages was a logical step," says Dr. McGovern. "Anthropology is the study of culture and so is foreign language. There is a really dynamic relationship as each field affects the other. A willingness to put yourself in an uncomfortable situation and learn a new language is the greatest respect anyone could possibly show to another culture."

"This is cutting edge stuff," says Dr. Douglass. "There is a national movement toward emphasizing cultural aspects in language studies. The American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Language is developing their national proficiency tests to measure cultural knowledge as well as language skills. We have a great opportunity to have a more coherent language department."

Students majoring in Asian Studies, French, German or Spanish will have common experiences within the department. Each student will be required to study cultural anthropology and sociolinguistics. The senior seminar will be a mutual experience for majors, as each seminar will have a common theme, for example, "Women in the Workplace." A French major might present a paper on women working in France and an Asian Studies major might focus on women in an Asian country."

Dr. McGovern says, "As we develop seminar themes and topics, our students will not only learn about the culture of their target language, but they will learn about the cultures that their peers are studying. All majors will make progress reports and share their research about different cultures."

There are 11 full-time faculty members in the Foreign Languages, Literatures and Cultures Department, including natives of Peru and Japan. Dr. Carrie Douglass says, "Our students will learn other cultures through many venues including classroom activities and watching SCOLA, direct TV from Europe and other areas of the world. My students will watch the film series Destinos, a Spanish version of an American icon — the soap opera. Students enjoy keeping up with the characters, and at the same time they are learning aspects of Spanish culture."

She says that the department will also take advantage of the Internet. "During our May Term class in Bulgaria, several of our students utilized the Internet to converse with native Spaniards," she reports. "They were ecstatic when people on the other end really understood what they were saying."

Dean Lott is excited about the possibilities of this new program. He says, "This program and department are consistent with Mary Baldwin's commitment to international education. We see the real potential to develop this program as a model for other liberal arts colleges like MBC."

Dr. McGovern agrees. "When our students study a language at MBC, they will better understand that language because they have studied the cultural contexts in which that language functions. They will in turn develop a meaningful understanding of that culture and language. For example, they will not only speak French fluently, but they will know that French people aren't rude just because they don't always smile in the same situations as Americans . . . Knowing when to think French loaf and when to think Wonderbread will help our students break bread in any culture."

Spain's dilemma

Carrie Douglass on bullfighting

by Mary Beth Plant

After centuries of association, it is hard to imagine Spain without thinking of majestic fighting bulls, but few Americans understand how deeply divided the Spanish people are over this tradition.

Dr. Carrie B. Douglass, assistant professor of anthropology and Spanish, has just completed The Horns of a Very Real Dilemma: Bulls and the Negotiation of Identity in Modern Spain, a book that attempts to explain the place of the bulls in Spanish culture and identity.

In many ways, this book has been a life-long project for Dr. Douglass. A self-described Army brat, she lived all over the world as a child. Born in Panama, she started school in Japan and graduated from high school in Germany. "Home," she said, "was wherever the furniture was."

After earning a B.A. from the University of Nebraska, she and a girlfriend made plans to travel through Europe. They started in Athens and got as far as Barcelona, where she fell in love with Spain; that was the end of the trip for Douglass. She spent the next eight years there.

She met her future husband, Fernando Opere, while she was teaching English as a foreign language in Barcelona. It was in Spain that she first envisioned her life's work. "I realized I loved teaching," she said. "I realized the classroom is where I flower." However, she also discovered that English was not what she wanted to teach.

Douglass received her Ph.D in anthropology from the University of Virginia and joined the Mary Baldwin faculty in 1988. The following is an excerpt from the introduction to her book, which has been accepted for publication by the Symbolic Series of Arizona University Press:

LOS TOROS

THERE ARE AT LEAST 16 DIFFERENT KINDS OF SPECTACLES OR GAMES INVOLVING BULLS IN SPAIN. ONLY ABOUT 500 OUT OF 15,000 FESTIVALS HELD ANNUALLY ARE THE BULLFIGHTS MOST AMERICANS THINK OF, THE CORRIDAS. THE REST INCLUDE SUCH ACTIVITIES AS RUNNING BULLS IN THE STREETS AND CLOWNS PLAYING WITH BULL CALVES. THE COLLECTIVE NAME FOR ALL THESE BULL GAMES IS LOS TOROS.

Although most of the data for this analysis comes from intensive fieldwork done during the years 1983-1986, it is important to add that I lived in Barcelona from 1970-1978. Those eight years witnessed the decline of the dictatorship, the death of General Franco, and the transition to democracy under the constitutional monarchy. Furthermore, these were the years that citizens realized the extent to which the industrialization and urbanization of Spain had taken place: a new Spain was ready to be born. All of this I saw from the perspective of Catalonia, a prosperous, culturally distinct region located on the Periphery of Spain. Inevitably, my experiences and first-hand knowledge from that period have crept into this analysis of los toros...

What I found interesting about studying bullfights in Spain was that so many people showed irritation when I said I was studying them. I felt defensive and embarrassed to admit (in some conversations) that I was investigating such a tacky, "stereotypical" subject, as if I, single-handedly, were responsible for perpetuating myths about Spain, and thus, affecting the listener's life in a negative way. At the same time, in most of Spain, there is hardly a patron saint festival without the bulls, hardly a street without a bar decorated with a bullfight poster or bulls' horns, hardly a conversation without a bullfight expression. Moreover, for every Spaniard that threw up his arms in exasperation at the foreigner's interest in bullfights, another Spaniard assured me that the bull was the totem of Spain, that fiestas revolve around the bull, and that bullfights were a sublime art. "What is going on?" I asked . . .

[The bulls] serve as a vehicle to talk about two historical Spanish debates about identity. The first is the place of "Spain" in Europe. This has to do with Modernity. For almost 200 years, many Spaniards have seen the presence of los toros in their country as symbolic of the obstacles to Spain's modernization, and thus, acceptance into the European community and world view. Los toros symbolize non-Europeaness, and must be rejected. "Only the tourists go to the bullfight," say these Spaniards.

The second debate concerns regional identity and the place of the various regions in the construction of the Spanish state. This debate has to do with Tradition. Although some regions view themselves as more "European" than others, the "cultures" also define and reify themselves through their traditions. If they were all modern, they would all be the same. Tradition differentiates one culture from another. Thus, regions often identify with one taurine game and not another . . .

Nevertheless, the bull is the thread that ties all the regions together. Rather than the animal, it is the games with bulls that change as one moves across the tapestry that is "Spain." Although some places in the south of France and Portugal also celebrate their fiestas with bulls, the debate over the toro bravo (wild bull) is the truly significant Spanish debate and thus can be said to signify "Spain."

Spanish ambivalence is probably predicated on a perceived opposition between modernity and tradition, and the desire to have both. Does one have to give up a 1,000 year old tradition (the bulls) to be modern?

"Take the bull away from here," says Spanish writer Antonio Gala, quoted by Douglass later in her book, "and we'll see what is left. Will we recognize ourselves without the passion of the pro and con of los toros?"

THE UNCOMMON ART OF THE COMMON MAN

by Sarah O'Connor

THE QUILTING PARTY, unidentified artist, probably 1854-1875.

... when I heard that there were artists, I wished I could some time be one. If I could only make a rose bloom on paper, I thought I should be happy! or if I could at last succeed in drawing the outline of winter-stripped boughs as I saw them against the sky, it seemed to me that I should be willing to spend years in trying.

— Lucy Larcom, A New England Girlhood, 1889

At the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center in Williamsburg, VA, the paintings of living Georgia artist Mattie Lou O'Kelley with their loving depiction of family and community life jostle for space with rare African-American dolls from the late 19th century.

"I never tire of looking at our collection," says Carolyn Weekley '67, director of the Folk Art Center. This is the oldest institution in the United States devoted exclusively to collecting, exhibiting and researching American folk art. Opened in 1957, the collection started with the 424 folk art objects donated to Colonial Williamsburg by Abby Aldrich Rockefeller.

Wandering through the maze of rooms, visitors are immediately impressed with the variety and vitality of the collection: an early 19th century painting of a baby who has fallen asleep in a red high chair. His head lolls to one side and he smiles in his private milk dreams. A wooden carving of a blacksnake swallowing a mouse, fashioned by an unknown carver in the early 20th century. The mouse is halfway in, its eyes still open. A matching pair of whale teeth from the 19th century. One is engraved with the figure of Justice, the other of Liberty. "The Quilting Party," a painting done in the mid-19th century by an unknown artist. A dog chases a cat, a white-haired man dandles an infant on his knee, a young man offers fruit to an attractive young woman, a couple hold hands secretly under the table.

Individual personality and humor shine through this art in ways not often seen in classical art. We are told in one will exhibit, "Playfulness is an essential element of being alive, and folk art provides ample ways to express and share that aspect of human nature."

What are some of the other functions of folk art, and what makes an object folk art? According to the museum brochure, "Folk art is the art of common people, done with uncommon style." For Carolyn Weekley, there are two important criteria. First, folk art is generally created by people who have no formulaic training in art. Second, it is uninhibited. "The artists don't feel any inhibitions in expressing themselves. They don't say, 'I can't paint like a Charles Wilson Peale, so I won't paint.' The attitude is, 'I will paint regardless.'" Folk art is created for several purposes: decoration (a carving), to provide a historical record (a portrait), or for a practical purpose (a weather vane).

Weekley's interest in early American culture began in her childhood in Gloucester County, close to Williamsburg. That interest grew at Mary Baldwin College, where she majored in art and was known affectionately as "Stuffy," a nickname bestowed by her father, who considered her "big stuff." After graduating in 1967, she entered the distinguished Winterthur Program, associated with the University of Delaware. There she received an M.A. in Early American Decorative Arts and Cultural History in 1971.

In a career that has never wavered in its course, she started in 1971 as the administrator of the Museum of Southern Decorative Arts in Winston-Salem, NC. After a stint as curator at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond, she was named the curator at the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center in 1979, and then in 1984 she became the director. Last year Weekley also took on the directorship of Bassett Hall, the former Williamsburg home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller; and Carter's Grove, a 1755 plantation owned by five generations of the Burwell family, located on the James River six miles southeast of Williamsburg.

As she moves about the museum pointing out one example of folk art after another, Carolyn Weekley's enthusiasm is contagious. "This one is to die for," she says of a squat jolly carving of a fiddler. "I have lots of favorites. When you're doing a lot of research on an artist, the tendency is for that person to become your favorite."

She is currently studying the paintings of Edward Hicks (1780-1849). Hicks was raised by a Quaker foster family and later became a Quaker preacher and a carriage painter. His paintings were generally composed for his family and friends. During his lifetime his reputation was confined to his hometown area of Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

In order to understand more about how Hicks worked, Weekley is painting her own reproduction of his most famous painting "The Peaceable Kingdom," which is in the museum's collection. "A lot of people don't understand what his paintings mean. They are a very serious statement about the rift between the Quakers in the early 19th century [when conservative and evangelical groups broke apart]. My work now is focused on the symbolism in these paintings. They are complex and very intellectual."

"To me art is one of the great resources of my life. I feel that it enriches the spiritual life and makes one more sane and sympathetic, more observant and understanding, as well as being good for one's nerves."

— Abby Aldrich Rockefeller,
January 7, 1928.

Abby Aldrich Rockefeller, for whom the museum is named, began collecting folk art in the 1920s before it had been "discovered." Hers became the premier collection of folk art paintings at that time. One of the founders of the Museum of Modern Art in New York, she saw an artistic relationship between folk art and what modern artists and sculptors were trying to achieve.

In 1932 the Museum of Modern Art opened "American Folk Art: The Art of the Common Man in America, 1750-1900." The show contained 175 pieces from Abby Aldrich's collection and traveled to six other sites. The first major exposition of its kind, it established folk art as an important part of American culture and stimulated interest in folk art across the country. Abby Aldrich donated her entire collection to Colonial Williamsburg in 1939, and her husband John D. Rockefeller, Jr. contributed the money to build the museum. The Folk Art Center has continued to add to its original collection through donations, auctions, contacts with family members of artists, dealers, and in some cases ongoing relationships with living artists.

The museum, in coordination with Colonial Williamsburg, frequently organizes material around themes that help people understand their own lives. "It is very important that we are located in Colonial Williamsburg," says Weekley. "We have the opportunity to make bridges intellectually between 18th century culture, which is very foreign to many people, and the present day." An exhibit opening in January 1996 will be titled "Redefining Family." It will examine the way the family unit in the 18th century evolved into something very different in the 19th, something similar to what we know today.

A special goal for Carolyn Weekley is to see the museum used more by children. "The material is accessible, exciting and dynamic for children. We don't have to try to get them interested; they are interested." The museum is exploring ways to train teachers to use the museum as part of their classrooms.

"One of this nation's greatest treasures is our rich and varied cultural heritage — a heritage forged from the ways and customs of the many different peoples who settled our land. This proud heritage has been preserved and passed down throughout our history by traditional artists and crafts people. Engraved in their artistic traditions, in their wood carvings, pottery and quilts, in their spirituals, fiddle tunes and tall tales, is the legacy of the American experience."

— Bess Lomax Hawes, director of the Folk Arts program of the National Endowment for the Arts.

BABY IN RED CHAIR, unidentified artist, 1810-1830.

Touring the exhibit at the Folk Art Center raises many questions about the connections between folk art and craft, music and lore. Weekley is quick to tie them together. "There are so many things which were produced in the craft tradition that in their own time would just have been considered utilitarian objects and which we have decided have artistic merit and we have made them art, such as pottery or weather vanes." Pursuing the links between folk art and folk music, the Center recently held an exhibit of Blue Ridge musical instruments. In conjunction, they offered a workshop on the folk music tradition in which present-day instrument makers and musicians participated.

Making connections is a significant part of Carolyn Weekley's work and a significant part of what folk art is all about. Weekley builds bridges between the 18th century and the present, between children and art, between folklore and folk art. Folk art provides connections between past generations and present, individuals and families, individuals and community, the spiritual and the material... between that which makes us different and that which binds us together.

Quote on the wall as one leaves the museum:

"How much piecin' a quilt's like livin' a life... The Lord sends us the pieces, but we can cut 'em out and put 'em together pretty much to suit ourselves, and there's a heap more in the cuttin' out and the sewin' than there is in the calico. The same sort o' things comes into all lives, jest as the Apostle says, There hath no trouble taken you but is common to all men."

— Aunt Jane of Kentucky, ca. 1900

Miss Baldwin's Seminary

On two occasions in the 1930s, Charlotte Ranson Taylor, Class of 1892, spoke to the students of Mary Baldwin College, reminiscing about her days at Augusta Female Seminary and about her cousin Mary Julia Baldwin. What follows is an edited combination of her talks. They provide us with a charming word picture of Miss Baldwin, who was never photographed or painted. The original, handwritten texts are filed in the Mary Baldwin College archives, gifts of Mrs. Taylor's son Alfred.

Cousin Mary Julia, as we called her, was a dear cousin of my father's. She and my grandmother were first cousins and she was a frequent visitor in our home from my childhood. She would drive up to Oakenwold in her carriage with her coachman, Uncle Ches. He would help her out and my father met and escorted her into the house. She would sit in the library and talk to father and mother of her girls, her problems, and her plans; and they talked of us and of our home life. She knew our names and showed interest in our games and pets. We felt she was a real friend.

Miss Mary Julia Baldwin was born on October 4, 1829, in her home on South New Street, now torn down. Her parents died when she was quite young and her grandparents gave her love and care. She was an only child, retiring in disposition, with few intimates and always studious and a great reader. She was educated at Augusta Female Seminary under Reverend Rufus W. Bailey, its founder, and was an honor graduate. [In 1863], she was persuaded by Mr. [Joseph] Waddell to take over the presidency of AFS. Mr. Bailey had been followed by several other principals serving only a year or two and during the war the school was at a very low ebb. Miss Baldwin took over the school, with Miss Agnes McClung as head of the domestic department. She overcame all difficulties, borrowed equipment from her friends and neighbors, used all sorts of makeshifts for furniture, took the girls in [with] payment in food or fuel, and the school revived and has had unbroken success ever since. No one anticipated for Miss Baldwin the wonderful development of character and influence that was to be hers.

I wonder if you can imagine her. Miss Baldwin was tall and well-proportioned; a commanding figure, a gracious presence. Her hair was smooth and shiny, and she wore it parted in the middle and drawn down over her ears into a low knot behind. Her dress was always black silk, [with] a close fitting basque with lace or linen collar; a full, long skirt; to the day of her death we think she wore hoop skirts. Her hands were soft and shapely; her skin was smooth. She never wore glasses, but carried a lorgnette that she used when looking closely at paper or book. Miss Baldwin was highly intellectual, with a wonderful keen insight into human nature; calm, full of strong faith and courage.

I would like to make you girls see the Augusta Female Seminary as it was when I came here. When I was eight, Cousin Mary asked father to let me enter AFS. Two other girls were entering in the fall, Anne Cochran and Mattie Wayt. We were friends and comrades all through our years there. The first year we were taught by Miss May Brooke, a senior, I think. Cousin Mary advised with her as to our studies, heard us recite, and kept us from annoying the older girls.

The next year we graduated into Miss Nannie Tate's room at the end of the back gallery. [Nannie Tate was the first full graduate of the seminary and served on the faculty for 50 years.] You went down a step into a long narrow room, with an aisle up the middle. Miss Nannie sat at the end of the room on a raised platform behind a low railing with her desk and her footstool on which we loved to sit when she helped with a hard example. Miss Baldwin was an almost daily visitor to that room. She knew us, what we were studying, and was pleased with our progress. It was a joy to us when our names were on the board for perfect spelling for a certain number of days, or when we could work correctly on the board a problem or example. She always looked pleased.

One year, I sat by the window that overlooked the kitchen entrance and watched the groceries being delivered and the wagons bringing supplies. We always knew when the girls were to have soup or cabbage by the odors wafted up to us. We never went to school without a clean Mother Hubbard apron on and the older girls and teachers wore shawls. needed, too, for the back gallery was open and the covered way up to Hill Top had latticed sides through which the cold wind blew.

There was a long frame building of classrooms at the top of the terrace below Hill Top. There, later, Miss [Virginia] Strickler fought Caesar's battles with us and taught us to love Horace. Miss [Martha] Riddle, with her charm and poise, filled us with a love of English history. Mrs. [Caroline] Crawford, a dear old lady, cousin of Miss Baldwin, taught us piano, and Miss [Helen] Fairchild had us all in chapel after two o'clock and tried vainly to teach us to sit correctly and write a flowing Spencerian style and to draw the beautiful squares and circles as she put the copy on the blackboard. Mr. [John] Murray taught us botany and astronomy and took us out at night to study the heavens. A splendid English teacher was Miss [Sarah] Wright. I never hear Macbeth or King Lear mentioned that I don't see Miss Wright sitting in her eager animated way with her feet on the rungs of her chair, helping us to see the beauties of literature and poetry. Mademoiselle [Agatha] Jacot taught us French; we had Mr. [Fritz] Hamer for music; and so it goes. They were charmed, carefree days.

I think Miss Baldwin was especially interested in her day pupils. She wanted every girl in Staunton and Augusta County to have a chance at an education. No one ever knew how many girls she helped nor how much of her money she used in educating poor girls. We knew her love and prayers followed us each day.

Miss Baldwin was a faithful member of the First Presbyterian Church, a most generous contributor, and she required the girls to attend the column [formation]. Their costume was a black suit and grey uniform hat and how the girls hated those costumes. It was amazing at what angles they could turn and twist those hats to make them individual.

Miss Baldwin had a parrot that perched on the back of her chair, and the girls loved to teach it bad words! And a little black dog wearing a bell round his neck was her constant companion and our alarm clock! We loved and respected Miss Baldwin so much, we did not often need him to warn us.

[Miss Baldwin's] interest in missions led to the financial support from herself and her girls of the Riddle School in China, the Charlotte Kemper School in Brazil, and the Mary Baldwin School in Korea. Her girls have gone out to teach and nurse, to make homes and to enter business, always carrying the imprint of her character and influence.

No appeal for contributions of church or town went unanswered. No living person knew the limit of her charity and good deeds. No greater blessing has fallen to Staunton than her simple and beautiful life.

Two years before her death, in recognition of her devoted service, the name of the school was changed from Augusta Female Seminary to Mary Baldwin Seminary, and [in 1901] a beautiful window was put in her memory in the chapel. [The Mary Julia Baldwin Memorial Window, a gift of the Alumnae Association, now hangs in the college's Martha S. Grafton Library.]

Miss Baldwin died on July 1, 1897, able to be up with an active mind to the last. She died, but her work goes on. This college now stands as a great monument to her untiring energy, arduous labors, and devotion to her profession and to her Master's work.

VWIL OPENS ITS DOORS

On August 22, 1995, the charter class of the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership arrived at Mary Baldwin. Their first challenge was to make their way through the battalions of reporters who were on campus to cover the event. Over 30 news teams showed up that first day. Eight satellite trucks broadcast directly from campus. Additional reporters covered the wilderness orientation, the first coeducational ROTC classes at VMI, and the first weeks of classes at Mary Baldwin. VWIL has been or will be featured on CNN, FOX, ABC and CBS news, "Good Morning America," the "Today Show," local television and radio stations throughout Virginia and Washington, DC, and on National Public Radio and German Public Radio. Print journalists came to campus from the New York Times, The Washington Post, U.S. News & World Report, Rolling Stone, the Village Voice and newspapers and wire services from throughout the region.

The 42 students met the challenge with good humor and intelligence, quickly becoming media savvy. The morning after their arrival found them on a two-mile run up and down Mary Baldwin's hills. After that they set off for a four-day wilderness experience where they backpacked, kayaked, completed ropes courses, went rock climbing and rappelling, learned to read maps, and went caving... but the students are perfectly capable of telling it in their own words. Here are one student's thoughts about her first few days:

A vertical strip of marbled paper with a complex, swirling pattern of dark and light grey/black and white, resembling a peacock or shell pattern, runs along the left edge of the cover.

The ANNUAL REPORT

CONTRIBUTIONS TO MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

JULY 1, 1994 - JUNE 30, 1995

We at Mary Baldwin College understand fully that the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. Our college is an outstanding consolidation of many exciting programs: the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership, the Master of Arts in Teaching Program, the Adult Degree Program, the Program for the Exceptionally Gifted, and, of course, our successful traditional program.

This Annual Report is also a consolidation — of many generous donors: our alumnae, parents, friends, trustees, volunteers, faculty, staff, corporations and foundations.

Our benefactors contributed over $2.4 million to the college during 1994-95. For the second straight year the Annual Fund broke the $1 million mark, setting a new record at $1,138,000.

Your gifts help us fulfill our mission of providing talented young people from all economic circumstances the opportunity to receive a solid liberal arts education.

For your support, counsel, loyalty and generosity, Mary Baldwin College is deeply grateful.

Dr. Cynthia H. Tyson
President

ANNUAL FUND

The Annual Fund is made up of thousands of contributions, large and small, which go toward the general operation of the college. Annual Fund contributions constitute more than half of all contributions made to the college each year.

Annual Fund Awards

Through these awards, we recognize our alumnae's enthusiastic support of Mary Baldwin College. The awards are presented each year and are named in honor of past presidents of Mary Baldwin College. A representative from each class accepts the award on behalf of her class during Founders' Day Convocation.

We commend the following classes for their outstanding loyalty to the college.

THE FRASER BOWL CLASS OF 1946

Awarded to the class presenting the largest gift to the 1994-95 Annual Fund, the Fraser Bowl was secured by the Class of 1946, which contributed $59,561 this year.

THE LEWIS PLATTER CLASS OF 1947

Awarded to the Class of 1947, the Lewis Platter recognizes the class with the largest increase over its previous year's gift. This year's recipient contributed $17,583 more in 1994-95 than in 1993-94.

THE JARMAN CUP Class of 1939

The Jarman Cup is presented each year to the class that demonstrates the highest level of participation in the Annual Fund. In 1994-95, 60% of the class of 1939 participated.

THE SPENCER PITCHER Class of 1993

The Class of 1993 is awarded the Spencer Pitcher for attaining the highest percentage increase in participation from the 1993-94 to the 1994-95 Annual Fund. This class increased its participation from 9% to 20%, an increase of 122%.

The members of the top giving clubs listed below are instrumental in allowing Mary Baldwin College to move forward in her mission of providing innovative, creative programs. The gifts of these donors continue the traditions of the people and places in whose honor these societies are named. Gifts of $1,000 and up form a strong foundation for the college and ensure the legacy of Dr. Rufus Bailey and Mary Julia Baldwin for future generations.

Centennial Society

The 1994-95 year marked the 100th anniversary of the naming of Augusta Female Seminary for Mary Julia Baldwin. The Centennial Society was created to honor Miss Baldwin, and to celebrate her status as our first philanthropist. Mary Julia Baldwin left her entire estate to Mary Baldwin College, thereby forming our first endowment fund. Members of the Centennial Society are recognized for giving a gift increased by $100 or a first-time gift of $100 to the 1994-95 Annual Fund.

The 11 classes that gathered together during the festive 1995 Reunion Weekend pooled their resources in order to make a significant gift to Mary Baldwin in honor of their special year. The classes of 1940, 1945, 1950, 1955, 1960, 1965, 1970, 1975, 1980, 1985 and 1990 collectively raised over $128,000 for the Annual Fund.

Congratulations and thanks go to all who participated in this effort.

Two classes were especially recognized for their exceptional efforts in raising money for Mary Baldwin. The Class of 1940 won the Reunion Giving Award for the largest gift, raising over $22,000, and the 50th Reunion Class, 1945, had the highest participation rate (57%).

As you can see, their recognition was justly deserved. All classes raised more money in their reunion year than they had the previous year.

The Young Alumnae Program

The Young Alumnae Program was established in 1994 in an effort to increase Annual Fund involvement in the four most recently graduated classes. With giving clubs suited to a recent graduate's budget and a strong emphasis on participation, the Young Alumnae Program has proven very successful. Together, the young alumnae classes had an average participation rate of 27% and gave a total of $4,750, surpassing the $3,500 goal by $1,250.

THE GLADYS AWARD Class of 1991

The primary goal of the Young Alumnae Program is to increase participation of young alumnae in the college's Annual Fund. The Gladys Award is presented on Founders' Day to the class with the highest percentage of participation. Congratulations go to the first class to ever win the Gladys Award, the Class of 1991. Thirty-six percent of their class participated in the 1994-95 Annual Fund.

Churches

Mary Baldwin College was founded in 1842 with the support of the Presbyterian Church. This bond continues today. Individual churches and the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic demonstrate their support for the college's educational progress through Annual Fund contributions. Many thanks go to these churches for their donations.

The Virginia Foundation For Independent Colleges

Every year Mary Baldwin College, along with 14 other privately supported colleges and universities in Virginia, benefits significantly from the generosity of business, industry and other private sources across the state through the efforts of the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges. In 1994-95 this total effort produced $4,408,000 from 744 private enterprise contribution sources for VFIC colleges. Mary Baldwin College received $176,061 as its total share.

The VFIC is a joint fund-raising organization established by and for the benefit of its member colleges. Businesses and community leaders assist in soliciting contributions from the corporate community. These monies are distributed in June to the 15 non-tax supported member colleges and universities according to a standard formula: 40% on the basis of undergraduate enrollment and 60% divided equally.

VFIC has been recognized nationally as the premier independent college fund among the 38 similar associations in terms of its annual distribution to member institutions.

In 1994-95 the following companies and individuals provided leadership contributions of $5,000 or more to the VFIC.

The Kiracofe Society

The Heritage Society has been renamed The Kiracofe Society in memory of Charlene Kiracofe '25 who died April 4, 1987. Through planned giving, her estate gift was one of the largest ever received by Mary Baldwin College.

The alumnae and friends listed below are hereby honored for naming Mary Baldwin College as a beneficiary in their wills, life insurance policies, retirement plans, and/or trusts.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the Kiracofe Society, please contact Nancy P. McIntyre, director of special gifts, at 540-887-7011, for additional information.

DESIGNATED GRANTS & GIFTS

Endowment funds are frequently established as permanent memorials to inspiring teachers, fellow alumnae, or other individuals who have made a significant contribution to the Mary Baldwin College community. They ensure the continuous funding of a scholarship, program, or other college resource. New endowments are established with a minimum of $25,000; contributions to existing endowments are accepted in any amount. The endowment funds listed in this report are those to which contributions have been directed in this fiscal year. For a complete list of existing endowments, contact the vice president for institutional advancement.

NON PRO TEMPORE SED AETERNITATE

Mary Baldwin College

"If you want it bad enough, it comes from the heart and the mind." my squad leader said to us as we were learning to march in formation for the first time. Isn't that the truth. And in the past two weeks, the students of the charter class of the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership (VWIL) have proven that, indeed, they do want it badly enough. As does Mary Baldwin College, who has fought so hard to have us here.

It has been a tough road for everyone involved. For the Mary Baldwin College faculty and staff who created the VWIL program, it has been a constant, uphill legal battle. For the students entering the program, there is the uncertainty of a pilot program, one not yet steeped in tradition. That tradition is for us to establish. For parents, saying good-bye to a college-bound child is always hard, something made even harder by the constant surveillance of video cameras and news media from across the country.

For those of us in the program, it has been hard coming into a new environment while the country has watched to see what would happen. It was hard being at Mary Baldwin for only a day and then leaving to go on a trip in the mountains of Virginia. A leadership challenge and learning experience, they told us. If only we had known what was in store. Hiking eight miles with a 45-pound backpack, climbing rocks, white water kayaking, and getting up in the dark and going to sleep in the dark. It was hard not being able to see what you were eating for breakfast or dinner. And yet, no one backed down from a challenge.

I will always remember looking at the double wire bridge connecting two ends of a gorge that, to me, looked like a bottomless pit, and thinking, "I'll never get across that." The challenges we faced, as a whole, were not physical as much as mental.

To face my fear of heights was to face the biggest fear in my life. As I watched my fellow group members cross the bridge, my confidence was not building. Finally, the only ones left were Dr. Bryant, VWIL director, and me. Instead of going ahead, she decided to wait and see what I was going to do. Encouraged by the loud cheers of my group members, on the other side by now, and the faith Dr. Bryant had in me to push myself to the limit, I crossed the bridge. It was the most incredible thing I have ever done in my life and my eyes filled with tears when I got to the other side, followed promptly by Dr. Bryant, who said, "Good job. I'm proud of you."

I've never seen a group of more determined young women in my entire life; determined to succeed, determined to learn, and determined to lead. All 42 made it through the week, with the support and encouragement of each other. We came together as a group, as a family. Through our support of each other, we faced challenges, overcame fears, and pushed ourselves to the limit. Dr. Bryant and our assistant director, Mrs. Nan Rothwell, were there with us one hundred percent of the way. Their example to us often gave us the strength we needed to face a new challenge. That's what VWIL is about. It is about being there for each other, learning from each other, and being proud of each other.

What it is not about is trying to break down the tradition of the Virginia Military Institute. We have chosen to attend Mary Baldwin, a single-sex institution. We do not want to deny the cadets at VMI the same opportunity. Instead, we are trying to add to that tradition and create a tradition of our own. We are off to a good start. Forty-two of us have entered the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership, to begin and establish something to live for generations to come. We have been called pioneers, but deep down inside we just want to reach the fullness of our potential. We have learned that in order to become a good leader, it is often necessary to follow.

I am just one person, one of the lucky few to be selected to participate in this "historic" program. Our stories are all different, and those differences help to make us strong. However great our differences may be, one fact remains. We are in this together, and together we will get through this.

The Progresses of Mary Hill Cole

by Sean P. Steele

"How do you communicate with your citizens when there is no television, no radio, no mass forms of media? How do you have any source of power?" Questions like these explain Dr. Mary Hill Cole's fascination with the series of royal trips, called progresses, taken each spring and summer from 1558 to 1603 by Queen Elizabeth I.

Dr. Cole, associate professor of history, has been named the recipient of the 1995-96 Patricia H. and Karl F. Menk Award. The award will allow her to continue her research at the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, DC. The Menk Award is presented annually to provide financial support to a faculty member on sabbatical.

Cole's research seeks to answer questions about the propriety of a woman ruler wielding power during an age that was opposed to such a notion, and the connections between the ceremonies of the progresses and the issues of female sovereignty. Trying to write about this in today's world, however, is a challenge.

"You're trying to see things differently based on where we are today. You're trying to see it from the eyes of the past. From Elizabeth's perspective, she was taking these progresses, in large part, to reinforce her royal policies . . . Imagine the sight of 300 carts going down the road. It was incredibly chaotic." But out of this chaos, Cole asserts, Elizabeth formed a "ceremonial dialogue" with her subjects, a means of exercising power that intermixed politics and pageantry, ceremony and circus.

Mary Hill Cole's interest in the progresses grew out of, among other things, her doctoral dissertation in English history at The University of Virginia. Cole plans to finish researching and writing a book based on her current research. She says, "This book will be one that someone who knows nothing about the progresses can pick up and read."

When she finishes her own "royal trip", she hopes to bring the knowledge and insight she has gained during her sabbatical (which includes a month in London at the British Library) right back to Mary Baldwin and into the classroom. "I was looking for something that I wouldn't get bored with — and this has opened a lot of doors for me. I think my interest in how literature and history overlap might explain why many of my students become so interested in these subjects."

The Menk Fund - an opportunity for faculty development

The Karl F. and Patricia H. Menk Fund for Faculty Support and Development was established in February 1993 through an anonymous gift from an alumna, who wished to honor the Menks' commitment to teaching, scholarship and mentoring. The donor was full of praise for Pat Menk and her accomplished career. "Pat Menk showed us students that you could be a Ph.D., a mayor of a city, a historian, and at the same time be a good wife and mother."

Drs. Pat and Karl Menk both served as members of the Mary

Baldwin faculty. Pat Menk served as professor of history, college historian and author of the college's sesquicentennial history To Live in Time. Her late husband, Karl Menk, served as associate professor of microbiology from 1959 to 1981.

Pat Menk selected a sabbatical program as the target of the gift fund. "One of the greatest strengths of Mary Baldwin College has always been its faculty," she said, noting the particular importance of providing opportunities for faculty development in a small institution that places emphasis on teaching.

The fund was initially established with a gift of $25,000. Additional donations and earnings have brought the fund balance to $39,416, and part of its earnings are used annually to help support the Menk Scholar's sabbatical. The anonymous donor hopes the fund will grow to eventually support the full cost of the annual scholar's sabbatical.

To make a special contribution to the Menk Fund, contact Lydia Petersson or Nancy McIntyre at Mary Baldwin's Institutional Advancement Office, 540•887•7011.

YWIS program science whizzes get Gwathmey Grant

They spent three weeks in July and August on the Mary Baldwin campus distilling cholesterol from pork brains, culturing tennis shoe bacteria, and counting water-striders, among other pursuits. They are Young Women In Science (YWIS), a gathering of the best rising seniors in math and science in the state of Virginia, and their program has received a grant for $5,000 from the Richard and Caroline T. Gwathmey Memorial Trust.

In its 10th year, the YWIS program offers students a preview of the methods and theories used in college science courses. "Participating in a hands-on intensive research experience helps young women gain confidence in their abilities and encourages them to pursue science careers," says Dr. Lundy Pentz, YWIS program director and MBC associate professor of biology.

The Gwathmey Grant covered approximately one half of the budget for the 1995 session of YWIS. Dr. Pentz adds, "Mary Baldwin has continually tried to find outside funding for YWIS, and finally there has been a donor match." While the Gwathmey Grant alleviates current financial pressures, the college continues to seek substantial, long-term funding for this merit-based program.

Kelly Kathleen Cuiak (right) of Fredericksburg, a 1995 YWIS participant, plans on studying chemical engineering or biology when she enters college next fall. "The Young Women in Science Program was a wonderful opportunity to get a head start on my college education," she said. "I learned to manage my time in a college setting and enjoyed all the challenges of the program, especially Dr.

Lundy Pentz's microbiology class. Young Women in Science has really prepared me for all the science courses that I will have to take in college."

Ms. Cuiak is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Cuiak of Fredericksburg, VA. She is a senior at Stafford Senior High School.

MBC's new scanning electron microscope opens a big window on a tiny universe

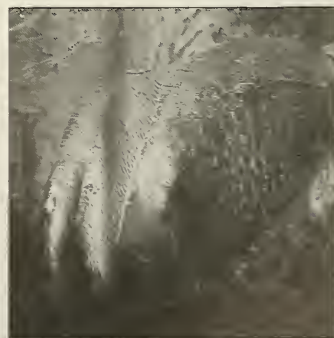

by Sean P. Steele

Truth can now be stranger than fiction. Thanks to the new scanning electron microscope located in the basement of Mary Baldwin's Pearce Science Center, dust mites look like extraterrestrial creatures, sand fleas like prehistoric monsters, and the surface of a bird feather like the bumpy terrain of the moon.

Acquiring a scanning electron microscope was no easy feat, but according to MBC Professor of Biology Dr. Jacquelyn K. Beals, all of the hard work has finally paid off. "Our first application was turned down by the National Science Foundation because they said we just wanted a fancy piece of machinery to play with," said Dr. Beals. "Our challenge was showing that we did, in fact, have an interdisciplinary program in the works to use the microscope. Our second grant application was approved in August of 1994 for $50,000 to be matched by the college."

Now, according to Dr. Beals, "The microscope will bring 'dull things,' like skin or hair, alive to our science students . . . It will give senior science students the opportunity to research things they had not been able to before." Plans are underway to incorporate the microscope into Professor Lundy Pentz's microbiology course, Professor Bonnie Hohn's botany course, and to utilize the microscope as a curricular bridge linking the various sciences — biology, chemistry and physics.

Doshisha Program

The Doshisha Program is in its 14th year at Mary Baldwin. This summer 34 students traveled from Doshisha Junior Women's College in Kyoto, Japan, to gain a cultural introduction to life in the United States and to improve their English. The three principal components of the program were academic/cultural classes, field trips and interaction with counselors. Jeanne Martino-McAllister serves as director of the program.

The Saga Program has brought students to Mary Baldwin for three consecutive years. Administered through the College and University Partnership Program in Memphis, TN, 16 students from coed Saga University in Saga, Japan, spent one week at MBC completing language and culture studies. Julia Pollock directs this program.

Sakae Program

Thirty-three men and women from all over Japan, including nine graduate students, spent six weeks at Mary Baldwin this summer preparing to enter American colleges in the fall. They took courses which covered such topics as how to study, English as a second language and U.S. cultural survival techniques. Dr. Ashton Trice directs the program.

Staunton: The Atmosphere

by Ko Tuda

Historical, hilly, neat, peaceful — there are many words to describe this city. Still if I have to express this city in a word, I choose "warm." Looking around this city from Mary Baldwin College, trees which surround a city look like swelling waves of ocean, roofs of houses look like floating ships on a sea. We cannot see what people are doing downtown from here. Still, we can see what the houses which are kept in good condition tell about what is going on. Once we go to the downtown, we can find white buildings of Mary Baldwin College from anywhere in downtown. From the viaduct of Staunton Station, we can see all the white buildings. They look like a coronet of a hill. The buildings built in 1842, are the symbols of Staunton. They fit to this city beautifully . . .

Shiga Program

In its third year at Mary Baldwin, the Shiga Program operates on the same principals as the Doshisha Program. Twenty-one students from Shiga Junior Women's College in Otsu City, Japan, visited MBC for three weeks. President Okano, head of Shiga and former president of Doshisha, valued the Doshisha Program at MBC so much that he introduced this program at Shiga. MBC Professor of Philosophy Dr. Roderic Owen directs the program.

Longtime friends of Mary Baldwin College Justice and Mrs. George M. Cochran of Staunton were honored as co-recipients of the 1995 Outstanding Virginian Award. Their selection marked the first time that a couple has ever been chosen for the prestigious honor.

Justice Cochran served on the Mary Baldwin College Board of Trustees from 1968 to 1981. He and his wife Lee Stuart Cochran have befriended the college in innumerable ways. Their wise counsel and willing assistance have greatly contributed to the college's success.

Justice Cochran's affiliations in business and private life have always underscored his commitment to justice and the welfare of Virginians. He has served on the board of trustees and/or board of directors for over 10 colleges, universities, foundations and businesses. He has also served as president of the Virginia Bar Association. He retired as a Virginia Supreme Court Justice, serving on the bench from 1969 to 1987. His career in the Virginia General Assembly spanned 20 years as he served as both a senator and as chair of the House of Delegates Courts of Justice Committee.

Lee Stuart Cochran currently serves as chair of Monticello's Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation and previously served as its president. She has served on numerous local and state boards and commissions. Through varied leadership roles, Mrs. Cochran has helped raise millions of dollars for Virginia's charitable organizations.

Justice and Mrs. Cochran were both instrumental in the establishment and continued success of the Museum of American Frontier Culture in Staunton. The museum depicts European and American heritage through living history exhibits on four farm sites. The Cochrans have served on the Museum Foundation's Board of Directors and were notified of their award during an announcement ceremony at the museum.

The Outstanding Virginian Award was created by the Virginia General Assembly in 1984. The Cochrans are the 13th recipients of the award, which pays tribute on an annual basis to a citizen of Virginia who, by his or her dedication and outstanding leadership, has made a distinguished and significant contribution to the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Members of the selection committee felt very strongly that in the case of the Cochrans, there could not be just one person selected. "Because under the law of Virginia a husband and wife are considered as one, we can pay tribute to both Justice and Mrs. Cochran," said Mr. James W. Fletcher III, chair of the Outstanding Virginian Day Committee. "They are the personification of a fine Virginia family and they are both in their own right outstanding citizens of the Commonwealth of Virginia."

New faculty debut on campus

Several new full-time appointees joined the Mary Baldwin College faculty for the 1995-96 academic year.

Ivy Arbulú was named instructor of Spanish. Ms. Arbulú is a native of Peru and a Ph.D. candidate at The University of Virginia.

Dr. Amy L. McCormick, assistant professor of economics, comes to MBC from the faculty of William & Mary College. She earned her Ph.D. from Harvard University.

Timothy D. Pittman was appointed to direct MBC's Study Abroad Program and to teach German. Tim has served as a German instructor at The University of Virginia, where he is a Ph.D. candidate.

Robert D. Reich was named assistant professor of communications. Bob has served as a senior copywriter at Rosiak & Associates and Techni-Graphic Advertising. He holds a master's degree from New School for Social Research/Parsons School of Design and is a Ph.D. candidate at Temple University.

Former adjunct instructor Kevin F.

Schanning was appointed instructor of sociology. He will split his workload between the traditional and the Adult Degree Programs. He holds a master's from Northland College and is a Ph.D. candidate at The University of Virginia.

Carsten Schmidt, instructor of music, holds the M.M.A. from the Indiana University School of Music and is a D.M.A. candidate at Yale University School of Music. He made his formal debut as a concert pianist with Essen Philharmonic Orchestra in 1984 and has performed regularly as a soloist in the United States, Germany and Austria.

Three full-time professors joined the Physical and Health Education faculty this fall. Donna G. Miller was appointed assistant professor of physical and health education. Donna served as MBC's assistant women's tennis coach last year. She also holds a master's degree from James Madison University. Mari Lou Moore was named instructor of golf and head coach of the field hockey, basketball and lacrosse teams. Lou will also serve as recruiting coordinator and supervisor of student workers in the Physical Activities Center. She earned her B.A. from Bridgewater College. Joseph P. Witt was named instructor of physical education, athletic trainer and sports information director. Joe earned his B.S. from Roanoke College and his master's from Virginia Polytechnic Institute & State University.

Several MBC faculty members changed their status and area of service for 1995-96. Moving from part-time to full-time teaching duties was Jean D. Gilman, assistant professor of political science. Jean joined the MBC faculty in 1992 and is a Ph.D. candidate at The University of Virginia. Assistant Professor of English Dr. Robert D. Grotjohn moved from the ADP to the traditional program this year. Dr. Roderic Owen, professor of philosophy, moved from a split workload in the ADP and traditional programs to duties in the Master of Arts in Teaching and traditional programs. Dr. Owen has served on the MBC faculty since 1980.

1995 Broman Concerts feature four Young Concert Artist winners

The 1995-96 Carl Broman Concert Series opened in September with a duet performance by violinist Mikhail Kopelmann and his wife, pianist Anna Gourfinkel. The couple has been performing together since they were students at the Moscow Conservatoire.

Mikhail Kopelmann was remembered by Broman Concert regulars as the first violinist of the renowned Borodin Quartet. The group stunned the Staunton community with an outstanding performance at St. Francis Catholic Church last year. One of the major quartets of today, the group had a close association with famed composer

Dmitri Shostakovich.

Mary Baldwin's popular Carl Broman Concert Series brings outstanding musicians to the campus and community during a year-long series of entertainment. Performances cover a wide range of musical tastes and interests. The series honors the memory of Dr. Carl Broman, who was head of the college's music department for three decades between 1935 and the late 1960s.

The second performance in the 1995-96 Broman Series will feature soprano Camellia Johnson, on Thursday, October 26 at Staunton's Trinity Church. Camellia Johnson was the solo winner of the 1993 Young Concert Artists International Auditions. She made a remarkable New York recital debut in March 1994 during the Young Concert Artists Series.

The remainder of the 1995-96 Broman Concert Series includes three other Young Concert Artist winners performing in MBC's Francis Auditorium. Nokuthula Ngwenyama, violist, will perform on January 26; Diana Doherty, oboist, on February 26; and Fazil Say, pianist, on March 20. The American Boychoir will also perform at Staunton's Trinity Church on Saturday, May 18, 1996.

Alumnae President's Letter

Dear Alums,

What fun the 1995 reunion classes had during Alumnae College and Homecoming! Our 278 alums spent the weekend renewing old friendships, talking to their favorite professors, hearing an update on the college and just enjoying the beauty of the Mary Baldwin campus. It's not too early to start making your plans for our 1996 Alumnae College and Homecoming, May 24 to 26, 1996. The Homecoming and Continuing Education committees and Reunion Event Class Chairs are already working to bring you an excellent program and a variety of activities.

At the Association's annual meeting, revisions to the constitution and by-laws were unanimously approved. The following alumnae were elected to a two-year term on the Executive Committee:

Sue Warfield Caples '60
Administrative Vice President
Judy Lipps Garst '63
Program Vice President
Ann Shaw Miller '54
Secretary
Dana Mason Flanders '82
Treasurer

Lynn Tuggle Gilliland '80
Career Networking Chair
Carly Ferris McPherson '78
Alumnae Involvement Chair
Alumnae elected to a two-year Board term included:

Katherine Louise (Bebe) Bolen '92
Kelly Andrews Coselli '85
Donna Neudorfer Earp '76
Margaret (Meg) Carrington Kluttz '93
Carmen Holden McHaney '73
Harriet Barksdale Runkle '94 MAT
Betsy Gallagher Satterfield '66
Mary Jo Shannon '53
Jane Starke Sims '68
Elizabeth Peyton Wooldridge '68

Your board is composed of very dedicated alums who meet twice a year to plan the various activities and educational programs offered to you. Our next meeting is the weekend of March 22, 1996. We welcome your ideas and suggestions.

Over the years, many of you have traveled with the Alumnae Association. Now you have the opportunity in June 1996 to join your fellow alums and Dr. Ethel Smeak '53, retired professor of English, on a trip through the heart of Europe. Our adventure will include an eight-night cruise down the Rhine and Mosel rivers with a three-night stay in Interlaken, Switzerland. During our journey, Dr. Smeak will give lectures of regional interests. In September, the Alumnae Board is offering a 10-day cruise aboard the 96-passenger Renaissance III. We'll travel from Venice to Monte Carlo, with ports of call to some of Italy's finest cities. For further details, contact the Alumnae Office at 800•763•7359.

During the coming year, I hope each of you will give your time, talent and financial resources to our alma mater. Remember, our continued support enables our college to meet today's challenges.

Best wishes for the coming year.

Sara "Sally" A. Bingley '60
President of the Alumnae Association

In search of . . . all Mary Baldwin College alumnae

Since graduating, you may have tried to get in touch with an old classmate only to find that the last address or phone number you had in your telephone directory was outdated. Well, your troubles are over. Soon an impressive directory of our alumnae will be available to help you locate all your old friends.

The new Mary Baldwin College Alumnae Directory, scheduled for release in June 1996, will be the most up-to-date and complete reference of over 9,100 of our alumnae. This comprehensive volume will include current name as well as student name, class year(s) and degree(s), address, business information and more — all bound into a classic, library-quality volume.

The Alumnae Office has contracted with the Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company to produce your directory. Research and compilation of data will begin soon through mailed questionnaires. If you prefer not to be listed, please contact the MBC Alumnae Activities Office in writing as soon as possible.

The new Mary Baldwin Alumnae Directory will make finding an alum as easy as opening a book. Look for more details in the next issue of both Columns and The Magazine.

Elizabeth Solomon

1995 Outstanding ADP graduate wants to open children's minds

by Roussie Woodruff '91 ADP

Elizabeth Solomon, Mary Baldwin's Outstanding Adult Degree Program graduate for 1995, is a poet and a woman of the soil. She lives in Howardsville, VA, south of Charlottesville, in a huge old farmhouse with a wide porch and dozens of potted plants. During our interview, she mixed up the dough for her daily loaf of home-baked bread. Afterwards we toasted her success with a glass of her homemade elderberry wine. She sent me on my way with some of her garden's cucumbers and a plant called "Mother of Thousands," which is an apt name for Elizabeth herself.

Unable to have children, Elizabeth and her husband Wynn adopted two of their own and also took in 35 foster children. At one point Elizabeth had 14 children in her home. They stayed anywhere from two weeks to two and a half years. "You don't love them any less because they're with you only a short time," she said. "You love them more because of what they've been through." No longer a foster mother, Elizabeth now volunteers as resident night manager at a local women's shelter.

Elizabeth applied to Mary Baldwin's Adult Degree Program 10 years before she actually enrolled. "It all takes so long to come together," she said of the responsibilities and obligations, the fears and the finances that distract and delay us from our true desires. She admits her time was actually past due. The principal of a nearby school asked her to teach disadvantaged children. From giving poetry workshops in local schools, she knew she could make a difference in children's lives. But as much as she wanted the job, she could not take it because she did not have a degree. At last ready to commit herself to finishing her education, she told herself, "If I don't do it now, I probably never will."

A published poet who was the founder and editor of a weekly newspaper, the Central Virginia Leader (circulation 37,000), that printed only good news, Elizabeth chose English as her major. She graduated magna cum laude and "with distinction" for her senior English project. She is never far from her daily journal where she notes her thoughts, prayers, reflections and poems. Her accustomed discipline in writing was a big asset in college work. "I made lists every morning of what was important to accomplish including my assignments and my chores," she said. Elizabeth also knew to take breaks, which she would do by walking in the woods near home. "You have to get away from your books . . . or you lose your focus."

Despite her discipline, Elizabeth was frustrated by her "splintered time." "You can't give a hundred percent of your time to studying the way traditional students can," she said. For that reason her best memories of Mary Baldwin are the Summer Week courses she took in 1993 and 1994. The week on campus, living in a dorm and eating in the college cafeteria, with nothing but her studies "begging" for her attention, gave her the traditional college experience she missed. Botany in the Field, she said, taught by Dr. Eric Jones, "was absolutely the most exhilarating experience of my college career and my life." And of Dr. James McCrory's Elementary School Methods, she said, "He is the best teacher I have ever had in my life. He's a great example I hope to follow."

As are so many other college graduates, Elizabeth Solomon is looking for a job. She would like to teach or do educational research, or perhaps work in human services. "I know I want to be involved in some way," she said, "in opening children's minds." Her mind has been opened to her own potential by her time at Mary Baldwin, and she urges other adults, as she will no doubt urge her students, to have courage. "You don't know what you can do," she said, "until you try."

Alumnae News Makers

Claire Lewis Arnold '69

Claire "Yum" Lewis Arnold '69 has been named director of Morrison Restaurants, Inc. The corporation is based in Mobile, AL, and operates restaurants and cafeterias in contract food marketing. Morrison Restaurants employs over 35,000 and generates over $1 billion in revenue per annum.

Charlotte Lunsford Berry '51

In June 1995, Charlotte Lunsford Berry '51 became the first woman ever to chair the United Way campaign of Midlands, SC. The Midlands United Way has a 70-year history. Charlotte was also the first female to ever chair the United Way agency of Asheville, NC.

Mrs. Berry is chair of the National American Red Cross Committee on Disaster and Community Services. She is a member of the board of directors of Wachovia National Bank, and president-elect of the Historic Columbia Foundation.

Nell Boone Rogers Carvell '63

Nell Boone Rogers Carvell '63 recently received her Master of Arts degree in special education from Texas Women's University in Denton, TX, finishing with a perfect 4.0 grade point average. The subject of her thesis was an evaluation of the effectiveness of the preschool language curriculum for Head Start students from low income families. Nell developed the lessons of the language program through Southern Methodist University in Dallas with assistance from a grant from Texas Instruments Foundation. The program resulted in an improvement in language skills of more than 40 percent higher than would have been expected without the program.

Nell now serves on the Southern Methodist University staff as principal investigator of the Head Start Language Therapy Program. The program will soon be extended to other low income schools, again through a grant from Texas Instruments. Nell also serves as an instructor in SMU's teacher training program.

Sanford Jones McAllister '80

Sanford Jones McAllister, a 1980 graduate of Mary Baldwin College, has worked her way through the GOP ranks and earned a high-profile leadership role with the Republican party. In March 1995 she was named executive director of the Republican National Committee (RNC), where she serves as the top aide to Chairman Haley Barbour.

McAllister is responsible for the day-to-day administration of the national committee's budget and overall operations. She also coordinates the activities of the committee's major divisions, including political and field operations, communications, fund raising, strategic planning and member services.

McAllister also worked with Haley Barbour in the White House Office of Political Affairs and served in the media relations office of former President Ronald Reagan.

Elizabeth Linn Traubman '63

Libby Linn Traubman '63 has been honored with a listing in the book San Mateo County Women's Hall of Fame 1984 - 1994, Portraits of Dedication. Mrs. Traubman's sister-in-law Ann Wilson Linn '61 presented a copy of the book to Mary Baldwin's Martha S. Grafton Library.

Libby Traubman was elected to the San Mateo Women's Hall of Fame in 1994. She is a licensed clinical social worker and holds a master's degree in social work. She led in the establishment of Beyond War, a group that evolved into the current Foundation for Global Community.

She has worked for 25 years in her community serving the elderly, the terminally ill, war veterans and learning disabled children. An active civic leader, she often speaks publicly to educate the community on energy efficiency, alcohol and drug abuse by youth, television violence, and the importance of volunteerism and valuing diversity.

Alumnae volunteers represent Mary Baldwin at college inaugurations

MBC President Dr. Cynthia H. Tyson is often invited to participate in the inaugural ceremonies for the new presidents of other colleges and universities. If she were to accept all the invitations, she would be able to do little else. So, she often asks that a trustee, alumna or friend of Mary Baldwin represent her and the college at inaugurations across the country.

The representative dons academic gown, cap and hood and takes part in the academic procession. Not only is the experience enjoyable for the alumna, but Mary Baldwin benefits as well from the public recognition of our standing in the academic community. Many, many thanks go to those listed below who have represented Mary Baldwin at college and university inaugurations throughout the country during the 1994-95 academic year.

Lending a helping hand to Habitat for Humanity

MBC Vice President for Institutional Advancement Mark Atchison, (right), Director of Auxiliary Services Allen Martin (center), and community volunteer Mark Lundlad of Harrisonburg saw lumber for a "blitz build" home, built by Staunton's Habitat for Humanity, September 10 through 16, 1995. Habitat for Humanity has chapters nationwide which help people acquire affordable housing who otherwise might not be able to. Several MBC faculty and staff members donated their efforts to this project, which was dedicated on September 17. There is also an active MBC student chapter of Habitat for Humanity.

CHAPTERS IN ACTION

Chapter Events

Little Rock, Arkansas

James McHaney, Marilyn Newson McHaney '43 and Carmen Holden McHaney '73 welcomed MBC Dean of the College Dr. James Lott (center) to Little Rock with style. Libby Darwin Grobmyer '72 helped with the reception attended by 25 alumnae and friends. Guests enjoyed talking with Dean Lott and hearing about the changes taking place at Mary Baldwin.

New Orleans, Louisiana

Parents Council members Kay Rapier (center) talks with James Roddy and Tia Nolan Roddy '69 during a cocktail reception at Kay's home. Kay, her husband Michael and their daughter Jane '98 hosted the event for over 40 guests. Local alumnae and friends welcomed Dean of the College Dr. James Lott to his first, and hopefully not last, visit to New Orleans. Guests included alumnae, current students and parents, and prospective families.

Baltimore, Maryland

Alumnae Donna "Sarah" Shanklin McComas '73, Mary "Ginger" Mudd Galvez '73 and Julie Ellsworth Cox '86 helped plan Baltimore's event at the Commodore Club. Over 30 alumnae and friends of the college gathered to talk with MBC President Cynthia H. Tyson and learn more about the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership.

Detroit, Michigan

A luncheon was hosted by Dorothy Jones Wrigley '70 to welcome MBC President Cynthia H. Tyson to the area. Janice Clark Freytag '80 helped make the luncheon a success.

Corpus Christi, Texas

Cecile Cage Wavell '45 (left) talks with Zoe Wavell Gottlich '76 and MBC President Cynthia H. Tyson. Cecile and her husband Kenneth graciously hosted a buffet supper for President Tyson's visit. Tracey Cote Allen '89 helped coordinate the event and greet 19 alumnae and friends.

Houston, Texas

Forty-three alumnae and friends joined President Cynthia H. Tyson for a cocktail buffet at Margot and Tom Easton's home (Margaret Teague Eaton '56). Chapter leader Cynthia Knight Wier '68 and Alumnae Board member Sue Lollis '79 helped coordinate the event.

Arlington, Virginia

Advisory Board of Visitors member Peter Pover and his wife Yvonne graciously opened their home for a cocktail reception in March. Here MBC President Cynthia H. Tyson chats with Mr. Pover. President Tyson and Vice President for Institutional Advancement Mark Atchison visited with area alumnae and guests. Alumnae Board members Louise Boylan '71 and Sanford Jones McAllister '80, Ingrid Erickson '89 and Patricia "Trish" Hylton '93 helped encourage over 50 guests to attend.

Lynchburg, Virginia

Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership Director Dr. Brenda Bryant and Dean of the College Dr. James Lott traveled to the Oakwood Country Club to discuss Mary Baldwin's newest program with over 20 alumnae and guests. Dr. Bryant (far right) talks with Ann Gray Graham '80, Alice Marshall Glass '80 and Tance Anderson Laughan '83.

Norfolk, Virginia

Allie Rounds author Barbara Allan Hite '58 introduced Mitzi Leshner '95 as she began her last performance of the play. Dean of the College Dr. James Lott, Nancy McIntyre, and Tracy Goad '94 traveled to Norfolk to welcome over 23 alumnae and friends. Chris Baylor '86, Jane Hudgin Frazier '73, Ellen Anderson Hill '67, Mallory Copeland Kahler '88, Faith Stuart McArdle '86, Julia Anderson Wilson '71 and Karen Wood '92 helped with the event by making desserts, accepting reservations and securing a performance location.

Mitzi Leshner '95 and Barbara Allan Hite enjoy a moment after Mitzi's last performance of Allie Rounds.

Attending Allie Rounds in Norfolk were alumnae Mary Margaret Beale Black '56, Anne Parson Baylor '52 and Reid Strickland Nottingham '56.

Roanoke, Virginia

Margaret "Peggy" Weaver Crosson '67 hosted a barbecue for over 60 area alumnae and friends of the college at her farm in Roanoke. Omega IV, a bluegrass band, entertained the guests. Helping make the picnic a success are (l-r) Judy Lipps Garst '63, Peggy Weaver Crosson '67, Cyndi Phillips Fletcher '82 and Gale Palmer Penn '63.

Staunton, Virginia

An annual tradition continued as local alumnae gathered for the 9th Ham to Jam Luncheon at Mary Baldwin College. A Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership update was given by VWIL Director Dr. Brenda Bryant. Chapter leaders Sylvia Baldwin '76, Nancy Kunkle Carey '51, Dana Flanders '82 and Patricia Brown Schlick '51 worked with Gini Ridge, MBC catering director, to select a delicious menu from the Ham to Jam Cookbook.

Julia Shugart Crist '92 (left) has been helping the Staunton/Waynesboro/Augusta County Chapter encourage more recent graduates to get involved with area events. Enjoying a happy hour at the Pullman Restaurant are Julia, Donna Myrtle Boxley '89, Executive Director of Alumnae Activities Jane Kornegay '83 and Nancy Kunkle Carey '51.

The home of Nancy Kunkle Carey '51 and husband Henry offered the perfect setting for a summer cocktail party for local alumnae. Attending the July event were (l-r) Sylvia Baldwin '76, Dana Flanders '82, Henry Carey, Nancy Kunkle Carey '51 and MBC President Cynthia H. Tyson. Over 45 guests attended the party and the chapter donated monies towards the Elsie Carleton Olsson Memorial Scholarship for Day Students.

Williamsburg, Virginia

Carol Wornom Sorensen '61 talks with Letia McDaniel Drewry '78, who helped coordinate a cocktail party at Carol and Dick Sorensen's home. Over 40 guests turned out for the event.

Also attending the Sorensen's cocktail party were Parents Council member Ann Gordon Abbott Evans '65, Carolyn Haldeman Hawkins '63 and Kent Seabury Rowe '62.

How to Eat Your Cake and Give it Away Too

by Margaret Herscher Hitchman '40

For years I had seen ads in various publications promoting the use of annuities as a means of giving to charities, but never considered this of any real interest to me. Recently, however, my husband Bill and I decided it might be something we should consider.

For several years we had been working with an estate planner, with the primary focus on conserving our estate from unnecessary taxes. We had seen what resulted when my father was not kept abreast of changing tax law by his lawyers until it was too late to alter his arrangements.

We were also making plans to move to a retirement community requiring a monthly fee, a new arrangement for us long-time home owners. Hence, we began to look for some investments to provide a fairly sizeable and steady long term income — perhaps using the funds from the sale of our house.

Insurance professionals started us thinking about annuities, but Bill questioned the tax implications of their plans. Just what it was that made us think of a charitable gift annuity, I don't know. But when we began to investigate, we found that we could come close to eating our cake and giving it away too!

We set up a gift annuity for Mary Baldwin College with the proceeds from the sale of our home, whose care had just begun to be burdensome. The return? We get a fairly substantial monthly income (with an inflation hedge built in) for as long as either of us lives, have a sizeable tax write-off (over five years), and will be able to help Mary Baldwin continue her mission after we are gone.

Nancy McIntyre, director of special gifts, worked through the Presbyterian Foundation (founded in 1799) to set up the mechanics of this gift. Now that it is in effect, there is little likelihood of future tax law changes using it up.

Seems like a bargain to us.

Double your vision

An anonymous benefactor recently made a generous $250,000 gift - $50,000 a year for five years - to Mary Baldwin College for the Annual Fund, on one condition.

This challenge gift must be matched by $50,000 in new Annual Fund gifts from our alumnae, parents and friends.

Such a gift demonstrates the donor's firm belief in the mission of Mary Baldwin College and challenges you to join her. It is more important than ever for alumnae, parents and friends to support this year's Annual Fund.

If you have never given before, give now--your dollars will have twice as much impact! And if you already give, please consider increasing your gift--those new dollars will be doubled!

Double your dollars

Because of the vision of her leaders, her alumnae, and her benefactors, Mary Baldwin College has been able to provide a quality education to women for over 150 years. Please help keep the vision alive with a gift to the Mary Baldwin College Annual Fund.
